Write

Write,
Right?
If you don't write
You will never right a wrong.
But if you don't right a wrong,
You will never write a right
A wrong,
Is a societal ill,
That eventually kills.
The art of writing thrills;
When you find that it can cure
The societal ills to the core.
When you see it as your right to write
But don't make writing a rite.
When you write
The wings of the printed page
Will spread your thoughts, without plenty wage.
Your words will leap over boundaries
Into Palaces, towns, homes, countries
And even the territory of enemies

When you want to convey
Your thoughts in words today;
You have to write, I pray.
When you utter your thoughts
The wind will steal your worth.

Though pictures speak more
Than a thousand words. For sure
Only words can explain what
The picture is portraying in worth.

When you want to lay bare
Your mind; write, don't spare.
